[00:00:00] Hi everyone I hope you're doing well. Why don't you go ahead and as usual someone shoot me a message. Let me know that you can hear me. Discord was giving me a message earlier saying that I, wasn't detecting my mic, but that appears to have disappeared. So I will always want to verify that first.

[00:00:24] All right thanks gents. Well anyways I hope you guys are having a good week. It's certainly been very interesting at least in terms of the news cycle, right. We have a lot going on with Iran. We've got a number of other things to talk about. We actually have a white pill of the week that does not relate to know something going on in our organization. They're actually good things happening in the, the world at large, which is, I know that sometimes when we do these, there isn't much in the news cycle that is how we're speaking of it in a positive light.

[00:00:56] But so the white pill of the week is this bill that Josh Hawley has introduced, the bill, I don't have the name of it on hand, but basically it's a bill that is going to tackle big tech. It basically looks at the, it's Section 230 of the Communications Decency Act which is separate, a creative distinction between a publisher and a platform, whereas a publisher is responsible for the content that is, that it is distributed. Platform is supposed to be an open forum. Well there are certain benefits that follow from being designated as a platform and all of these social media companies, right, Twitter, Facebook, YouTube, that, that say that their platforms, while they're actually not there because they meddle in the type of content, they engage in political and ideological censorship. So we'll see if this goes anywhere. But the fact that legislation is actually now being introduced is a good thing. And it goes to show, we'll talk about this a little more later, the implications of this the idea that like, we'll never see anything good from the GOP, is not, I don't think that's the case. Obviously the GOP establishment is pretty terrible. But again, we'll go through some other things before we talk about that.

[00:02:24] So we'll do our weekly roundup. I don't think we had any major your actions. We have a few bigger ones coming up soon, but looks like you guys have been pretty active with f;ying. So keep up the good work there.

[00:02:39] Flags have arrived. A number of you have messaged me, I would say the best way, I do have a new temporary payment processor set up, we're working on some longer term options too, and I have someone whose sole job it is now is to, not sole job, but who is basically applying to just as many payment processors as possible and eventually I think we'll be able to find one that sticks. So, but yeah, so if you want one of these flags that it turns out I think we have them in white too. I didn't order them so long ago, there is just, there's some issues and getting them out, production issues and so forth, but I'm pretty sure we have them in red and white. I'm going to post some updated better pictures at some point today or tomorrow but you guys can just go ahead and shoot me a message on MatterMost. If you would like to buy a flag they're pretty cool. They're big, they're bigger than the flags that we have in the past, and that is pretty good if you want to hang them up in your house, I'm sure most of you outside of activism will not be waving them around in public, although if you decide you want to do that, that's fine. I would recommend filling out an activism proposal form first, before you make that decision.

[00:03:50] So let us talk about these upcoming events. Right. So we have an event taking place the weekend of 4th of July, as you know. In terms of the the ticket prices and the dates that you can come out. Those are available on MatterMost in the Announcements channel. I'll do another announcement sometime before the weekend. But you should be able to scroll up and find those. So it's gonna be a great weekend. There's gonna be a lot going on for non-activists as well. If you are uncomfortable showing your face, you should show up. Have a good time. We're going to be hanging out at the HQ. The ticket prices, I had a few people tell me that they were a bit steep. They are not steep, they're not steep in comparison to any other event you're going to go to. And we've basically calculated it, so this, I mean it's going to cover your food, like you, I don't, I don't think we made much of, any money off of The Politics and Prose weekend. It's not covering lodging, you know, you don't have to pay for that if you're staying at the HQ, but it is covering food, because when you have, you know, dozens of people staying out at the same place, you know, making everyone, like, pitch in every time you're about to eat something, or forcing people to go out individually, just doesn't make sense. It makes more sense for you to have a big pool of money that you draw from to buy breakfast, dinner, you know, cover beer and stuff. So that is where the money is going. And if you, if there was no ticket prices but no food, you would probably pay a comparable amount. I mean you'd have to worry about feeding yourself too. So money is not going to my pockets, it's not, I don't think there's going to be really much of anything going to the organization's coffers either,, but obviously you know, transparency in things is very important. So I would strongly encourage you to come out to that. I'd like to remind you that us having a movement is dependent on people showing up.

[00:05:46] It's, you know, there are definitely to be lulls here and there. I think you know these things wane, you know, they ebb and flow, a lot of it depends on the chapter. Right. You know, maybe six months ago one chapter wasn't doing so hot and another, another was, and then maybe that flips, you know, these things are in a constant state of flux. But I would strongly encourage everyone to participate as much as you can, as much as you can.

[00:06:11] Now again if you want to treat this organization as as mostly a social network, if you just want to treat it as an online thing, right, if you are just so busy and you you just want to chat with people in person or sorry, on, on a platform, you know, in between work and family, and maybe work two jobs, I don't know. That's OK. That's absolutely OK.

[00:06:31] There aren't requirements to be an activist, though we'll talk about the Minutemen program a little bit here, the requirements that will be mandated for that program.

[00:06:43] So we have the Fourth of July event. I hope to see all of you here. Beyond that we also have, ee also have an event coming up in August and you can, I think we're just about ready to announce that and start accepting, pardon me, registration for that event.

[00:07:03] So I would also like to keep in mind that while these events are fun, they're absolutely fun, they're very necessary, right. If we stop doing this, we are basically letting the other side, we're letting them win to some extent, but we need to keep up the energy, keep up the momentum, and I'm very excited to seeing, you know, looking forward to seeing all of you guys at both of these events. But it's important keep that in mind, that there is like, the fun fraternal aspect of it too, a bit like we're here for a reason. We are here because there is a concerted effort to ensure that there are less people like us on the face of this earth and we all understand that that is unacceptable and that we're not just going to sit back while people who hate us make us minorities or worse. So everyone can find a way and should find a way to contribute. If you're not going to do activism I would strongly implore you to become a patron, to become an interviewer, to get active other ways too. Guys if we don't fight and we don't earn this victory then we don't deserve it. It's that simple. That's just how things go in this world. If you're not willing to stick up for what's yours it's going to get taken from you and you can cry all you want, no one's going to care.

[00:08:10] So July 4th and the August event in Texas, I, again, I, I'm pretty sure you can find those in Announcements on MatterMost. But I will be, so the Texas one I don't think we've, we've accepted registrations quite yet, but we're right around the corner from doing that by July 4th. You should find that and you know we'll be doing these, we'll be making announcements probably on a weekly basis to encourage you, to remind you guys, and you know, we do have the message deletion, you know, feature implemented on MatterMost. So we, we do have to make them fairly often so people can have access to them as well.

[00:08:53] So when it comes to the Minuteman program. Let's talk about that. So I think here's what, before we go on, we've implemented now, as, as of this fireside, sorry, this weekly address, weekly address notes. And I, I don't know if we think we've done that in the past, maybe once or twice, but just for future notice, you guys are strongly encouraged to come to these weekly addresses but there will be notes provided in the offchance that you're working, you're, you're with family. And I understand it's spread around dinner time more for the, I think it's after dinner for those those on the East Coast, which is kind of why it's at this time a bit selfish in that regard. But the point is, yeah, it's going to be good for you all to keep up to date with these notes even if you can't make these weekly addresses and thank you to the one and only AVK who is, who is volunteering at least for this weekly address to to take notes. Maybe it will prove so painful an experience that he will pass on the torch to someone else for future weekly addresses but those of you who, I think I have made at least one announcement on the MatterMost about the Minutemen program. There is a good chance that I have it though because sometimes it's hard to remember if I've discussed these things at length in weekly addresses, or if I've made announcements on that post. But I know that I have announced that we are doing the Minutemen program. But nevertheless somebody might not be aware of it. So we'll kind of go through that again. The Minuteman program is going to be an elite cadre of activists within the organization who are willing to show their face, willing to travel, want to do bold and audacious actions such as the one we did at Politics and Prose. And this is going to be for people who want to put themselves on the frontline, who have the means to do so, who ideally are resilient enough to do so. We're going to be paying very close attention to everyone's situation, you know, when we, when we talk to people, making sure that they're like actually in a position where they could do leader, they could do activism, and not have their lives totally upended. Because as we've seen with the result of these doxes is a lot of people, you know, based on the kind of job they have, or where they live, you know, many haven't really had any consequences, or maybe they got fired and they've got a new job the next day paying more. That did happen. So the point is, is we want to have, we want to be able to know who in the organization is pretty resilient. And keep in mind we were using the term antifragile in the past to refer to what actually was, it is resilient. So this is a trichotomy I believe created by Talib who has, has me blocked on Twitter, RIP, but that guy has probably blocked like thousands if not tens of thousands of people on Twitter, it's pretty impressive honestly, but I'm so, yeah, so basically I did detail this entity in the handbook, which I would advise you, to remind you of, you have to read before the end of the month. You have a week and a half to get to it if you haven't read it already, that there is this trichotomy - resilience, fragile and antifragile. So to be resilient means you can weather this storm right. The system is throwing attacks at you, right, media slander, doxing, you know, contacting your employer. That means that you can you can remain resilient. Right. You can you can withstand the storm. You can weather the storm and that's you know some people are in that situation, others aren't. That's OK. To be fragile is to, is to buckle under pressure. Right. So if you're, you know, if, if, you know, your family would disown you, if you lose your job and never be able to find a new one, now that usually, I've never really heard of that being the case. I mean it's a question of, you know, how effective system attacks on your existence, basically, could be. And then to be anti-fragile is, is admittedly fairly rare within the context of politics. To be anti-fragile means that not only can you weather the storm, as is the case with resilience, but you can also, that you grow stronger as a result of it, right, that not only do you say, hey I'm not moving, I'm not going anywhere, you know, keep withstanding these attacks, but you're saying I'm growing stronger as a result of the attacks. Now most of us can't do that. There some are some rare examples of for example if you're, oh, you know, Julian Vaughn of Delaware. That's a good example. Was the guy who's, I think a grad student, maybe his undergrad, at some fairly prestigious university, and there was a, let's say a hoard, let's say a group of POC surrounding him when he was drunk and filming him and he was going on some you know comically self aggrandizing rant about how white people are awesome and invented everything. Both of those are basically true, and obviously blew up, and oh, wow, how is this white kid, how does he think that he can say this? It's also factually incorrect. Yeah. But, but yes. So basically. Yeah. So what happened with him is that he's like, oh well, I've got this book, so you guys should, you know, and then everyone just, he probably sold thousands if not hundreds of thousands of copies. I bought a copy and probably never gonna read it but I was glad to support the kid. I have no idea what he's doing now. You know there's a good chance that, I feel like if you're memorialized and like just like one drunken event, like maybe it'll just, people, you know, in a few years people will laugh it off. But you never know. Kyle Kashuv is, has had his Harvard invitation, or acceptance, rescinded as a result of saying the N-word a few years ago. Fortunately I have never said the N-word, not even once. So I, so I don't have to worry about suffering any social consequences from that. Now. maybe other things that I've done, maybe other political statements I've made, there have been some consequences that have ensued from that. If you don't suit for. But I've never said the N-word not even once. I didn't even know what it was until recently, and I was, I was very, very horrified to hear it uttered for the first time when someone explained it to me. So.

[00:15:24] But the Minuteman program. So. Elite cadre of activists, we, we're going to push them towards resilience, making sure that all of them are prepared for what's to come, and we're gonna do the bolder more daring actions like Politics and Prose. Not all of the actions will involve shouting at people in bookstores. It's like any, any type of action, the more specific it is, and the more you replicate a very specific action, the more you have to do with diminishing returns. You know it's funny, I've had a number of people, like normie friends who have, you know, reached a, you know, gotten contact with recently, just a few of them, not like dozens or anything, but they've looked at my Twitter and they'd be like, why are you yelling at people in a library? And it kind of does look like that if you don't really know what's going on. But anyways, yelling at people in libraries is, it's the kind of thing you want to do sparingly. Right. So the Minuteman program, its invite only, Minutemen will have to be invited. If you want to be part of the Minutemen you are more than willing to let me know. But there is an application process, like if you indicate to me that you are interested, OK, I'll keep that in mind and if I say, hey, you know what, this person has gone above and beyond in terms of activism, this person does have somewhat of an employment and so forth situation that is amenable to doing identitarian activism, and this person has demonstrated good behavior, he has integrity, he hasn't done anything stupid, or at least too stupid, then I say OK, yeah, maybe I'll send this guy an invite. But yeah again it isn't, if I don't, and I think we've invited 10 to 20 people already. So the invites have gone out. Check your e-mail that you have on file and but don't, don't, don't be too offended if it doesn't, if you didn't get the first round of invites. The first round, again, it was just 10 to 20 people. So it's very small now. We just wanted to go with the people who were just, we knew 100 percent have dedicated themselves and so forth and there are others that we're going to be inviting too, there are definitely others, but wanted to get the first round out and then start working on the second round.

[00:17:38] So there's gonna be a prospect phase, I have to double check to see, I don't know if we've fully decided on the, I think it is three months, so there's going to be about a three month prospect phase by which or for which, you know, most people are going to have to, you know, most people who want to become Minutemen will have to demonstrate commitment to the organization, committed to the cause right. Well, you know, after three months we'll look back on your three month prospect phase and say how many actions did you go to. Well you sat home playing video games instead of while we were doing the July 4th action. You live like four hours away, you could have drove out. You know those are the kinds of things that were gonna say, take a look at. Also keep in mind guys I can see who's, who's playing what on Discord if you don't have that disabled. So keep that in mind. You never know who's watching. And you know, additionally, there are going to be some books that need to be read and so forth. And this can be a very official process but it's not going to be the kind of thing where you know after three months you just like yeah, alright, you're good. No that's going to be something that you have to work for, you have to earn, so that once you become part of the Minutemen you will feel like you actually have earned something and you will indeed have. You will indeed have. So that is the Minuteman program. Again, the first round of invites has already gone out. But like I said you can always feel free to reach out and you know, if I haven't seen too much activism from you, I feel, you know, it doesn't seem like maybe it would be the best fit, then I'll just give you some, I'll give you some advice for things that you can do to be recognized by the activism department for consideration of the Minutemen program. So that is the Minutemen. I want to give, I want to definitely thank and congratulate the activism department. Everyone knows who that is, for phenomenal work that they've done in brainstorming and designing and implementing this program. This has been something we've wanted for a while. Obviously I can't do everything and they've just done such a bang up job. That's it, it's, you know, hard, hard to see what I would have done differently. You know I did play a minor role in some of the discussions offered for planning things that we see, you know, presented to me, it wasn't a surprise, I do require people in the organization to let me know what they're planning on unveiling when they unveil their departments and so forth. But yeah they did fantastic work as always. So hats off to them.

[00:20:14] So moving along let's talk about what we can take away from the Josh Holly situation. I think the main thing here is, you know, you have the people who are trying to and they're not really even worth naming, but, you know, the narrative that people who have a grudge against us for, you know, resentment-driven reasons. Generally you know the accusation is that we are trying to take over the GOP. Well I've never attended a GOP meeting in my life so I don't know if that's really a viable accusation leveled against me. All of this stems from the NBC piece which was released the same day of the Today Show piece where they asked me like oh do you encourage your guys to get involved in the GOP. Sure. Yeah like oh go on. I was like well yeah I encourage my guys to go to GOP meet ups and then they're like oh he's plotting to take over the GOP like it's his big...

They're obviously trying to use that against the GOP for midterms. So let's talk about what that means, you know, infiltrating the GOP. If you infiltrate an organization like you have to do what they want, right. You have to give them what they want in order for you to move up in the ranks. But let's, I mean, let's just take a step back and say that we are a dissident metapolitical organization. We are primarily concerned with doing activism, creating other forms of content and facilitating community organizing. Those three things are absolutely, will remain our biggest endeavors, our most important endeavors. Right. Yeah. If we became an organization that was just trying to integrate into the GOP that would be, that would be a waste of the human capital that we have accumulated, right, this very talented, intelligent, driven and capable people in this organization and it's just kind of, turn that into, you know, TPUSA but maybe harder on immigration, would be, what, that would be worthless, would be worthless. You know we would maybe attract some wealthy Israeli donors which seems to be the way to make it on the right here in America unfortunately. But we're obviously not interested in that. So but I mean let's, let's talk about the GOP though. If you're not going to be an activist, you should again be thinking of other ways that you can contribute. One way you can do it is by networking with the GOP, talking about AIM, right. Urging people to join. I, we have some guys, you know, various states who have found success going to these these social events, finding, you know, finding the people who would be receptive to our message, and up to our standards and convincing them to join. So you know interfacing with the GOP to get people to join our organization. Absolutely. Yeah yeah. I mean that's a prime recruiting ground. Probably gonna have far more success going to a GOP meetup trying to recruit people than you will just on a college campus talking to like you know the average guy. Although in my experiences talking through people on college campuses doing activism there. If you're if you're going after a fairly masculine white guys then they're probably to be pretty receptive like they see the degeneracy all over campus.

[00:23:36] So that's another form of activism that's definitely worthwhile. But when it comes to you know the GOP just in general. Look, the dissident right needs to understand its role as the vanguard. But at the same time, you know, power, Jared Taylor said this recently at a private event we did, as you know, power ultimately comes from politics. I mean it's not, it's not the only way. But you know if, if what you're advocating doesn't involve like policy change at some point, you know, it's, it's not going to like, you know, you talk about changing the culture and politics, you're sure some someplace for that but if it doesn't result in culture change. You know, it doesn't matter. And I think within the GOP, so the other argument that the people level against, you know, people say there's no, you know, the GOP must die, must be crushed, we need a third, a third party, which obviously is never going to accomplish much. I mean we could raise a little awareness but I mean look there are decent people in the GOP. Josh Hawley is a perfect example. And the biggest issues that we face are totally compatible or totally approachable and can be dealt with from within a civic nationalist, you know, an outwardly facing civic nationalist perspective right. Obviously if you go in to the GOP and say I'm an identitarian they will black pill you, they are going to kick you out. That's understandable. Or in the case of Steve King your gaffes give people reason to believe that you might be an identitarian, no matter how hard you cuck afterwards, right. They're still going to be at your throat. So. But I mean there's, you look at, I mean, Josh Hawley's, that's a good piece of legislation. I haven't taken a very fine look to it with a magnifying glass, I'm also not a lawyer but I mean it's pretty decent like these standards would not apply to you know start ups and smaller social media companies and so forth, forums. Which is pretty good. And you know there are the main issues that we face mass immigration both legal and illegal. You know the protectionist trade policies do move big tech right, all of this stuff that Tucker talks about, like this is all, like, you don't have to be an explicit identitarian to promote this stuff. So I mean if you want to, look, you know, kind of the AOC wing is doing with the Democrat Party, that could be done within the GOP. It could not be done by me. Could not be done by explicit identitarians. It could be done by people who are closeted identitarians who are doing it covertly. Right. And that's something to consider, for people who are, and there are certain places, I'm told, where, you know, the state government is a little more quote based, than, you know, we might believe. Florida, I mean that was another whitepill with DeSantis and the sanctuary city order. I can't remember if that was in a week's time which is how we do the white pill of the week generally, but it's just, I mean, it just goes to show that just saying the GOP is dead, there's no point. It's, I mean you're basically seeing red, and the funny thing is the people that are making this argument, you know, what they actually advocate is well, we should build on infrastructure. Well you're hearing this and again it's the stuff that they, these criticisms leveled against us, you're hearing this from people who destroyed their own infrastructure, who burned all the bridges, who,, you know whose projects collapse like boxes, you know, outside of, outside of trailers. Right. I mean literally this is the case. So we are a distinct organization. Our main focus will never be GOP anything. If we can encourage, if we can in any way facilitate people to run and gain, get elected to office, people like awley, maybe Matt Gaetz, I know he's got these positions, he was coming out against a war, we need like GOP politicians who are anti-war. That's that's harder to come by. Right. Usually you just have like the few, some kooky libertarians, sort of libertarians like Rand Paul, Ron Paul who say these things, but yeah, I mean, if we can ,you know, it's not as if this is, this is fixed in stone, set in stone.

[00:28:02] So something to consider. We do have people who are active in politics, you know, and again. So if you guys can't do activism, you're looking for a way to contribute, maybe consider going into politics. Right. The average person in this organization is far more competent, intelligent, driven, honest and trustworthy, right, generally better people than the average person in that,, you know maybe when you're just only in dissident politics you don't really realize it, but when you go interact in the normal political sphere you see it, as we have undergone radical ideological transformation that has caused a great amount of intelligence, of intellectual honesty and insincerity to do, and the people who again, come to the cause for the right reasons, are generally many cuts above average.

[00:28:53] And I even had the head of park ranger and Dale Hollow basically admit that. I went and he and I were talking Saturday at some point, I was taking a walk outside I just stepped out to see how things were going, see if the opposition showed up, and he said, he said, boy every every time one of your guys walks by one of mine, they, you know, thank him for his service. Sounds like you guys are very respectful. You know they're very respectful and very, very grateful, you know, we're law abiding and so forth, [inaudible] law and order. He was like, yup. And I said, you know, something to keep in mind, something that I've noticed, is that people who come to these views, people who, you know, become nationalists for the right reasons, are often times in many regards like way above average. And he the guy looks at me and he says yeah it shows. So there are many people in the country for whom virtue is still like a good thing right. It's not just slavish adherence to a certain state promulgated ideology, it's actually oh, are you a good person. Right. That used to matter. That used to matter. It still does. It still does. And you know if the globalists win, or if they win for a while, like they continue racking up victories and consolidating power, that's going to be the things that matter. Right. That's what you have in, in totalitarian regimes right. It doesn't, you could be a great person, but are you breaking the orthodoxy. Well how good of a person could you really be if you think that children shouldn't be exposed to you know pedophile fanatics drag queens. Right.

[00:30:33] Well you might, you might, you know, volunteer at your church, and treat everyone nicely, you know,, be a good father. But you know you're not. You believe that we should have barricades on the southern border to keep out you know rapists and criminals. Well the Christian right, that's, that's the kind of cult like totalitarian mindset that we see starting to set in. Right. That's it, that's again one of many reasons why we're, we're fighting this, because that is unacceptable. That is an unacceptable state of affairs to define this fine country of ours. Moral of that is I would encourage you again if you can't do activism consider getting involved in politics. See what you can accomplish.

[00:31:16] Now the example of JamesAllsup. He ran. He did all of this this stuff right. And he would tell people yeah do it discreetly. Like if you're pointing James Allsup saying ha h, that's evidence that getting involved in politics is pointless. Well I mean the guy was doing it openly, right, about, you know, with all his views. Yeah that's what's going to happen if you do it openly. You shouldn't expect anything different. It's not cucked to go in there like a secret agent. [00:31:41] And from people I know who work in the White House and have other political connections there are like a lot of people who kind of get most of the issues obviously you know if you don't see them like retweeting our stuff it's probably because they can't. But the goal is to change that and to get it to the place where we actually, you [17.9s] know things are, people can interact with whom they want to, right. I don't think anyone on the right really likes the idea that, you know, even if they don't agree with us, they don't like the idea that they're forced to disassociate with anyone who has the wrong opinion. Right. There are a lot of people out there that dislike that. But the question is whether or not those people will be able to create a political order that changes things and we'll just have to see how things play out in that regard.

[00:32:34] So that concludes everything I had for you tonight. It's been a fairly, fairly uneventful week.

[00:32:42] One more thing. Let's talk about Iran for a little bit because that is certainly something that's on people's minds and I have people asking me about you know a demonstration. Here's the thing. I did tweet about it quite a bit today. My hunch is that nothing happens, I, you know, from, by all appearances I don't think Trump actually, I don't know. I don't think he actually wants to go to war with Iran. Now everyone around him does or at least many influential people around him does. The fact that John Bolton is still in this administration is just, just embarrassing more than anything else. But I would be surprised, I think you might. My concern is that Trump you know does something like he did with the Syria strikes where he's like alright, alright, I'll just, you know, strike some like pointless base with no one in it, and, yeah. And just, just to get these people, to get the, you know, the the war machine to, you know, off his back. But, but at the same time it does feel like things are heating up. So we'll, we'll have to see how things play out. But keep in mind as long as I've been involved in politics or just interested in politics that probably goes back to when I was 18 19. So 10 years ago, 12 years ago, there has always been like, it's, it's almost, you know, a lot of people have always been like, oh war with Iran is right around the corner, war with Russia's right around the corner. Saber rattling is just part of politics. It's just part of politics particularly today in the age of mass media, social media,, right everything so interconnected. There's a lot of, you know, thrusting your chest out at the other guy and I'm going to, if you do this I will do that, and you know, in the past these things might be, you might have pages, like you know people angrily writing letters to one another to see something printed in the newspaper, but just, just that the nature of modern communications makes it so it is just kind of back and forth that you see all of these news articles.. So I would be surprised if we go to war. I can assure you if we do go to war with Iran we will be doing protests. I'm not against, you know, flyering campaign or something. I think our graphics department has some good designs in the works. But, yeah, it's, we, we're not going to, we're not going to really jump the gun. We're going to wait until something actually happens and then, and then do it. Now maybe you could say well if we wait for something to happen and then and then it does happen well we miss a good opportunity but I kind of have to face the fact that nothing that we do in terms of activism is really going to stop war from Iran from happening if Trump and his administration are, you know, are interested in doing that like you know. Yeah. Maybe if we got millions of people in the streets of D.C. Yeah it can be pretty powerful right. Shutting down walkways, civil disobedience. Sure. We do not have those numbers in our organization at least not yet. So we do have to understand that, you know, that some forms of activism will be affected in some ways and perhaps not enough.

[00:36:01] So that concludes everything I had to say. I will take questions now, I think some of you already sent me some. How. OK. Are some a few questions.

[00:36:16] How can we get you on Tucker Carlson tonight? Can the 4th D.C. action propel you to be on the show?

[00:36:24] I don't think that's going to happen. Here's the thing. The only media generally that want to give us coverage are in that they're always going to be exceptions. Our opposition media, right, is there's this whole guilt by association thing. And if you're seen as being too friendly with the other side, then by that I mean, you know, anyone in the media being too friendly with, with an unperson like myself, then they are to be of the, you know, they're to be of the, you know, guilt by association. They're gonna lose, you know,, their social credit as well and eventually once you run out of that, then you know how that goes. So the thing is with Tucker is like he's pretty close to us, and you know with his, his new socially conservative economic nationalist message. Yet many, many people have likened that to certain things in the past that, yes. So, not going to happen. It's not going to happen. He just, that would totally be guilt by association. And you know he's already worried about his advertisers and so forth. So. But I've heard behind the scenes, yeah, maybe he understands certain things that he thinks he won't talk about. So.

[00:37:40] You mentioned that the GOP is not working in our best interest so we shouldn't be focusing on infiltrating, but how can we change them to work for us without getting people in it?

[00:37:47] Well I mean our main focus shouldnt be infiltrating right. So for the guys who can't do activism, yeah, get involved locally, right. I think there is, there absolutely is potential for like local state level politics. If you live in a quote unquote based state to get, you know, position people in government to end, to ba sanctuary cities, right. That that's totally doable. It's once you get to national level where it's like far harder to get things done because you have the deep state working against you and not that that isn't at play altogether, but. Yeah.

[00:38:26] So third parties were mentioned isn't this a possibility for AIM to become its own party on a national level.

[00:38:32] I'm not against it. I think I might actually be of age to run for president by 2024. Maybe, maybe I'll just get elected president. I think, I think well, we'll just have to go for that option. I'll do it if I must. But in all seriousness, I mean that' would be a great way to raise awareness. I know Richard Spencer was talking about running in 2020 but that fizzled out before it started.

[00:39:02] So yeah, good questions.

[00:39:07] Kyle - for the fourth event can we pay at the door?

[00:39:14] I would say,, I would say I'm honestly considering doing that. But I would say yes but we need to find out, message me on MatterMost if you want to pay at the door. We might just, might just do it that way. But on, but you can also, I mean, you can also send stuff to the P.O. box, like, you get here before the 4th. So I would encourage you to do that. But yeah.

[00:39:43] Thoughts on Charlie Kirk's recent blunder you recently retweeted about? Any way that we can exploit a type of ties to the land nationalism that is in opposition to Charlie Kirk's.

[00:39:53] Abstract ideas nationalism. Yeah. We just have to push back on like this liberal proposition nation contractual conception of America. And I'm actually reading. Who Are We by Sam Huntington now, that many of you may be, you know maybe some of you have read already, I know it's been out for a while but it is really good. All of you should read that. It's just basically it's a book on America's identity, right. Huntington talks about how America used to have an ethnic racial thing cultural and then credo, I think, there's the four types of identities that you know he talks about. And yeah you know with, with those identities have gradually eroded right. The ethnic component, the anglo saxon component was eroded when my people came over, too bad, in the mid-1800s and then with the dawn of civil rights, alas in the 1960s the racial component was lost as well. Perhaps some of the know nothings in here might disagree but I think that that one is far far worse of the two.

[00:41:00] I don't think I see any Bill the Butcher avatars in here which is good because that's actually very offensive to my people. But. Yes so true. Yeah. So I mean we do have to point out that yeah America's like, I mean, he's just trying to boil down America to like,, you know the creed, basically, the creed, the civic religion of. OK well,, you know it's being American, or America's just about,, you know laissez faire economics, populism, what are some of the other ones, limited government, it's like no, there have been many components to American identity throughout history and, you know the, the erosion of these have left, have basically resulted in, in this country just becoming a shopping mall. So it's important for us to understand, like, no, we have to have a sense of consciousness, of ethnic and racial consciousness to, to really continue the American project, right, to continue America as it was meant to be. So yeah, absolutely, I mean if you want to, if anyone wants to go to his next stop and call him out on this stuff, great. You know that guy David Santa Caa's like just doing so much damage to TPUSA. He did the StClair stuff. He's doing this stuff with Charlie Kirk. Phenomenal work. It just goes to show, like, you can, you can hold these people to their standards. And again I think that's an Alinskyite strategy I forget the phrasing that he uses but absolutely absolutely these people are opportunists and it shows what it shows we should expose them to you know they and cultures and Mark Dice, Mark Dice dunking on Ashley StClair was just too good because there are people out there who have a lot of influence and reach and who are well respected on the right who will call these people out for being frauds. So it is, if we can facilitate that. Absolutely.

[00:42:54] You mentioned that certain state governments are more based than others. Do you have specific states in mind you believe are sympathetic to nationalism? I'm currently researching Tennessee's political landscape but would like to hear.

[00:43:02] So I could direct, you know, there are definitely better political artistes in the organization than me when it comes to policy and so forth. But Florida is doing pretty well, Florida's doing pretty well, DeSantis is doing fairly well. Pretty has got some pretty good people in is it his administration or whatever state administration. But. As far as others go I don't know any off the top of my head. DeSantis is really the one that stands out. Definitely others out there. I'm told that Governor Kevin Stitt of Oklahoma is confirmed based and redpilled. Absolute family man. That's good to hear.

[00:43:58] Someone asked me if I lift. I do lift. I absolutely do. My lifts, my lifts aren't terribly impressive though. And part of that was because I wasn't eating much when I was doing MMA from April 2018 to basically the end of 2018. The goal was to do one amateur fight, that was supposed to happen in March of this year. I don't know. I don't see how that could have happened given everything that happened in March of this year, but I ruptured a disc deadlifting, so I had to basically set that out. Then I actually went out and when I went to the local MMA place by the HQ recently, to try out a class, maybe get back into it, and we were working on some, we're doing some throws as part of a drill, and I got thrown once and it, I just, it like totally flared up again, so I'm not fully healed. Which sucks, but yeah I do. You asked. I do bench press, military press, squat pull ups, used to deadlift, can't do that anymore. None of the numbers are terribly impressive at this point. I've definitely like made gains but I don't know I'm at the point where like the numbers go up when I eat like gluttonous amounts of food. But then I get like my body fat goes up too. So I've kind of reached the conclusion that if I look like fat if I've got like a fat face fat on around the neck looking a little pudgy doesn't matter how big I am it doesn't matter how much I deadlift. If I look like kind of gross then that's just going to not reflect great on the organization.

[00:45:35] So I mean, I've been making slow gains but I'm not really like eating the caloric surplus necessary to do an extreme lift. I think my, my best was dead lifting three plates but again that's not that's not terribly much.

[00:46:13] Please shill for book club.

[00:46:14] I've been asked to shill for the book club. So here here. Here goes. Join the book club. Message Peter on the server and he will add you there, you'll be initiated into the strange world of population genetics and ancestor, ancestral studies and all sorts of other arcane but definitely worthwhile subjects that are explored in our lovely book club.

[00:47:05] So the Texas event is in August, mid-August or so but we'll have the exact dates ready sometime this week. Once we have the announcement the invite going out so.

[00:48:18] All right well it seems like the questions are. So someone is typing. You know who you are. Go ahead and finish that up. I won't let you off here. You been typing for a while. I got a feeling it's going to be a good one.

[00:49:03] So this fellow says I have a few PDFs of men's etiquette and dress. Our members should make it their priority to enter greater right wing social environments and as gentleman to contribute. You'd be surprised how many people share our concerns if a member needs such a person and as a compliment, a competent gentleman it'd be easier to win them over to our organization.

[00:49:21] Absolutely right, it's, right, their dedication and leadership, right. So you know what is a gym story is a gym story. No I'm thinking of something else but yeah in dedication leadership, which is on the reading list that you should all read, talks about there is this communist strategy where, you know, instead of just like being like okay, let's, let's try to take over this factory and turn it, you know, turn them into unionists or communists or whatever, instead of going in there just being, like, the proletariat should rise up, like, you should, what they would do is they'd have like, you know, the guy just go in there,, just be the best, like he's the guy showing up early. He's friendly. Helping other people out. Just being a master of his craft and then find finally when the time comes and he's like,, we should you know, we should embrace communism. People were like wow this this guy's embracing Communism. We should do it. I mean that's the whole thing about there being like an optics debate there is no optics debate. There are people that understand like basic, basic human psychology right, that, that oftentimes it is, it is in fact the way someone looks and presents. That is a large determining factor in whether or not you will accept it, and others will accept their views, something not all you have to have substance but yeah, Che, if you want to post those in General on, on the national team and then by all means. Thank you.

[00:50:43] All right. Well that looks like it concludes the questions for tonight. So thank you. There will be notes again. If you came in late or I guess if you left early you would not be hearing this right now. But keep up the good work please. Try to do what you can to get out there, participate in activism, come out to the events, to meet ups, read the handbook, follow good OPSEC, right, better yourself as a person.

[00:51:09] I think everyone knows what we need to be doing. We just have to really dial things up. I'm saying that to myself as well to get it done because let's remember we're here in part because it's fun and we're a good company. But [00:51:20] there is a concerted effort to destroy our race and our civilization. [3.1s] And I think I speak for all of us when I say that we're not gonna let that happen. So with that I will leave you. Thank you and have a good night.
